AIAI Welcomes Executive Director

AIAI brings former ULI Executive Director On-board

New York, NY, April 2013 – The Board of Directors for the Association for the Improvement of American Infrastructure is pleased to announce John Parkinson has joined the organization as the acting Executive Director. John brings tremendous value to the group through his prior experience and we are certain his enthusiasm and strategic thinking will be a tremendous asset to the group as we seek to become a valued contributor in the industry. Prior to joining AIAI, John was the Executive Director of the New York District Council of ULI – the Urban Land Institute. ULI is a not-for-profit, education and outreach organization focused on professional development and sharing of best practices related to its mission and in support of the real estate industry.

John is charged with growing the organization’s membership as well as leading the organization as it works to implement its defined initiatives and educational objectives in the following areas:

- New P3 Legislation
- Facilitative Implementation for Government Agencies
- Creative Tax Solutions
- Institutionalized Processes
- Informed Decision Making

William Marino, one of the organization’s founders and Chairman of the Board states, “I am pleased to have John Parkinson join us as we unite to facilitate positive change in the industry. It’s been an enlightening experience to join with other industry leaders, as we work towards the implementation of much needed change in alternative project delivery methods. The growth of the American economy and job market is dependent on the creation of a strong infrastructure platform. We look forward to working as a group to help put America back to work. We believe John has the ability to move the organization forward and provide the industry with the benefits of education, thoughtful advocacy and a single voice dedicated to growth and development of American infrastructure.”

For more information on the organization, its initiatives and upcoming events, please email John at readytowork@aiai-infra.org.
