AIAI Welcomes Michael J. Garvin

Infrastructure Expert Adds Depth to AIAI Advisory Board

New York, NY, November 2013 – The Board of Directors for the Association for the Improvement of American Infrastructure (AIAI) is pleased to announce Michael J. Garvin has joined the organization as an Advisory Board Member. An associate professor in the Via Department of Civil & Environmental Engineering and a principal faculty member in the Myers-Lawson School of Construction at Virginia Tech, Garvin previously served as the associate director of the Myers-Lawson School from 2009-2012. His research and teaching focus on infrastructure development, emphasizing policy and planning, investments and financing, and asset delivery and service.

Garvin is a recipient of the Presidential Early Career Award for Scientists and Engineers (PECASE), which is the highest honor bestowed by the U.S. government on outstanding scientists and engineers beginning their independent careers. He has served as principal investigator for over $1 million of research funded by the National Science Foundation, the Transportation Research Board and the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation & Research on alternative project delivery and public-private partnerships and has spoken about P3s in many venues, including the American Road and Transportation Builders Association's Annual P3s in Transportation Conference, the Annual Meeting of the Transportation Research Board and the Annual Meeting of AASHTO's Sub-Committee on Construction.

About the Association for the Improvement of American Infrastructure

The Association for the Improvement of American Infrastructure (AIAI) is a non-profit organization formed in the District of Columbia to help shape the direction of the national Public Private Partnership marketplace. AIAI will serve as a national proponent to facilitate education and legislation through targeted advocacy.

AIAI's Board is comprised of leaders of the construction and development industry. Their extensive national and international experience and industry knowledge provides AIAI with a clear direction for developing and advocating policy and legislative solutions, allowing more equitable and effective partnerships across diverse market sectors from transportation and energy to educational, health and public service institutions.
